Introduction/Acknowledgements

The AIDS Office, San Francisco Department of Public Health is pleased to provide this newly updated resource guide to HIV prevention and social services in San Francisco. With many people's help and assistance, this guide has greatly evolved over the past five years that we have been producing it. This is the first time that this resource guide is being published in this easy to use book form. The guide encompasses those services most often needed by persons in San Francisco at risk for acquiring or transmitting HIV infection. The guide contains sections on HIV counseling and testing, HIV prevention, substance abuse, mental health, and general health social services. We have included an expanded reference guide identifying services most appropriate for HIV positive persons, transgendered persons, persons of color, women and youth.

The mission of the HIV Prevention Section of the AIDS Office is to help in the reduction of HIV infection through promoting health and enabling individuals and communities to increase control over the conditions affecting their health. We hope that this guide will help both service providers and consumers in San Francisco achieve these goals.

We would like to thank all of the agencies and individuals who gave their time to help us compile the information contained in this guide. Special recognition goes to both Alice Heimsoth for her major contribution in working with agency staff to update the comprehensive information in this edition and for supplying the cover photography, and to Aida Flandez for administrative assistance.

How This Book is Organized

This guide contains detailed information about the agencies offering services most often needed by persons in San Francisco at risk for acquiring or transmitting HIV infection. This book is organized into two main sections; an easy to use reference guide in the front, followed by the complete description of each agency/program.

The reference guide offers an abbreviated listing of service providers of each different service type arranged by primary target group (i.e. HIV positive persons, transgendered persons, persons of color, women and youth). This reference guide is divided into HIV counseling, testing and referral services (page 5), HIV prevention, substance abuse and mental health services (page 9), and general health social services (page 23). The address and telephone number of each agency is provided as well as the page number in the book where the detailed information about the agency/service is located.

Complete agency listings are also arranged by different service type. The listing for each agency contains detailed information on services offered, hours of operation, target population, languages spoken, costs for services and the amount of time someone typically has to wait before receiving services. The first alphabetically arranged section on yellow colored paper (pages 31-54) are agencies providing HIV Counseling, Testing And Referral Services. The second alphabetically arranged section on white colored paper (pages 55-168) are agencies providing HIV Prevention, Substance Abuse And Mental Health Services. The third alphabetically arranged section on green colored paper (pages 169-220) are agencies providing General Health Social Services.

All agencies are listed in the index located in the back of this book. As some agencies provide multiple types of services, they may be listed in each of the three main sections. The index includes all pages where an agency is listed.
