SFDPH Highlights

Public Health Accreditation and San Francisco's Community Health Improvement Plan (CHIP)

The San Francisco Public Health Department is preparing to apply for public health accreditation, and, as part of that process, we are creating a CHIP in collaboration with San Francisco's nonprofit hospitals, academic partners, and the broader community. A CHIP is a community-driven and action-oriented plan outlining our community's health vision, values, and priority health issues. The CHIP provides an opportunity for SF to create an innovative local model of community-centered health improvement that builds on our strong history of partnering with the community to identify priority health needs and improve population health. San Francisco will update its CHIP every 3-5 years.

Come visit the SFDPH booths to see murals created during the community visioning process!

Sustainable Communities Index (SCI)

The Sustainable Communities Index, formally known as the Healthy Development Measurement Tool (HDMT), is a system of over 100 performance measures that are used to track progress towards a livable, equitable and healthy San Francisco. The SCI was developed in 2006 by the San Francisco Department of Public Health through an 18-month long community participatory process to help understand the health and social impacts of new development in San Francisco neighborhoods. The tool is now routinely used to improve development plans and prioritize health in city initiatives.

Healthy San Francisco! Our health access program

Healthy San Francisco is a program created by the City of San Francisco that makes health care services accessible and affordable for uninsured residents. The program offers a new way for San Francisco residents who do not have health insurance, to have basic and ongoing medical care.

It is available to all San Francisco residents regardless of immigration status, employment status, or pre-existing medical conditions.
